This map and the Future Land Use Map can be amended. The Comprehensive Plan is intended to be a dynamic document that may be updated periodically. The Plan is the official policy statement for the District of Columbia and is a living document that must be able to address the needs of future generations. As circumstances change, the Plan must be updated to reflect new information and values.

This map was designed to be essentially correct as printed, and is in the public domain. The names of the Object/Activities on this map are not copyrighted, trademarked, or subject to any other form of protection. To the extent possible, all changes were noted in formal public hearings before the Council of the District of Columbia, and people appeared at those hearings for formal public input. The comments of the Comprehensive Plan amendments are incorporated into the final version of this map.

The generalized depiction shown on this map was designed to be essentially correct as printed, and is in the public domain. The names of the Object/Activities on this map are not copyrighted, trademarked, or subject to any other form of protection. To the extent possible, all changes were noted in formal public hearings before the Council of the District of Columbia, and people appeared at those hearings for formal public input. The comments of the Comprehensive Plan amendments are incorporated into the final version of this map.

The generalized depiction shown on this map was designed to be essentially correct as printed, and is in the public domain. The names of the Object/Activities on this map are not copyrighted, trademarked, or subject to any other form of protection. To the extent possible, all changes were noted in formal public hearings before the Council of the District of Columbia, and people appeared at those hearings for formal public input. The comments of the Comprehensive Plan amendments are incorporated into the final version of this map.